“Scott will take you out of your comfort zone and help you recall why you became an educator in the first place.”

- Marlo M, M.S. Principal

Go Love Now

Empowering educators to better manage schools, classrooms and students by encouraging emotional development, self-love, compassion and kindness. Attendees can expect to:

- Create a culture in the classroom where love, compassion and kindness are paramount.
- Understand the L.O.V.E. model to empower students.
- Be better prepared to work with parents who are not always supportive of their child's education.
- Learn ways to maintain their energy and excitement for teaching throughout the school year.
- Break down their own limiting beliefs.
- Work with counselors and administrators to manage misunderstood students who often times have experienced trauma.
- Identify personal traumas and how they might effect teaching.

About Scott

Scott Goyette is a college professor, coach and international speaker who empowers youth and adults to realize the importance of self-love, compassion and kindness. Working in schools and through community programs, Scott has built the Go Love Now organization with partnerships from leading educators, coaches, counselors and administrators based on the idea of creating more compassionate school cultures. This program works very well with Social and Emotional Learning programs and has been proven to help with bullying reduction and suicide prevention.
